Ir is the habit of the judicial mind to take no count of what is called remote damage. Porhaps it was for this reason that Lord Coloridge at the Liverpool Assizes was sorely puzzled when a witness who admitted that he had suffered from delirium tremens explained that 'that was because i he had been annoyed by his mother.' An American judge would perhaps here have desired the witness to be good enough to tell him ' where the whisky came in'; but the Lord Chief Justice only said 'Let me understand this delirium tromous? How dil that como about? After a somewhat laborious investigation it was discovered. that the witness had quarrelled with his mother in the market place, over the sale judge, 'gave you delirium tremens?' 'No. was the reply, ' but it made me take a little more drink than usual for two or three days, and that's it, your lordship.

A THOUSAND pounds for a carpet may seem a long price to the Philistines; but the commonsenti will remember that the produce of a Persian loom may be as much a work of art as a picture by Turner.
